Housing

Should we shift focus away from social affordable housing and permit a wider range of house types including smaller housing for an ageing and increasingly dependent population, as well as permitting housing for younger generations and those who want or need to work from home?

Should we give more certainty to developers by allocating sites for housing, or should we continue our approach of identifying a community's housing need and then working with communities and housing associations to identify suitable sites?

Spatial Strategy

What broad spatial areas could we use to help us determine the levels of development that might be acceptable?

Should we allow any community, no matter what it's size, to respond to the community's need for development, or focus on Bakewell and the bigger villages (currently 62 villages?